Nolan was a very reliable partner to have during this assignment. I placed a lot of trust in him to help finish the assignment over the weekend while I was away, and he delivered by writing a README that is better than any that I have written so far. While we were working on the project in class, Nolan was very patient with the slow start we had on Monday and Wednesday. Even in the slow and less productive times, we still held together as a team pretty well. Nolan also brings his kindness outside of class, as we found each other earlier today and we talked about how things are going. Though we had to navigate through struggles in our assignment, I am thankful that Nolan is someone I could trust to finish it well when I was gone.
